He explained that transportation is provided free of charge for the day of the evaluation. The eligibility process can take up to 4 hours with a determination that is provided within a 21-day period via mail. If the applicant is found to be not eligible, there is an appeals process that can be submitted.

The CARE evaluation office is located in Downtown Los Angeles that does have its challenges, such as parking and construction.

Mr. Okamoto also provided a verbal visual of the CARE facility that included areas for check-in, waiting, transit evaluation, and the safety mobility management area, where two mock vehicles are available with an explanation of what Access is, how it operates and how it sees safety working with Access (Access Services, Inc.) themselves. Applicants with mobility devices are offered tethering and marking assistance. This is free and completely voluntary; however, there are times where applicants decline such assistance. After the evaluation is done, they are then returned to the vehicle lounge at which time they can either leave or wait for the Access vehicle to take them home.

As additional information, Mr. Okamoto stated, Access is currently using the basic industry standard color lines for their programs.

Customer Services for Access is very important. They utilize a voluntary survey that does a thorough investigation on overall service and to assure satisfaction. For CARE, a voluntary satisfaction survey was introduced to make necessary improvements internally. More recent improvements include a walkthrough by the Senior Supervisor Manager in the lobby to assure satisfaction, additional sensitivity training, quality assurance, conduct audits on CARE evaluations. CARE has also started utilizing a system of numbers when referring to applicants instead of the applicant name.

In response to comments made by President Benavides, 1st Vice President Neal and Commissioners Reyna, Pinchbeck, Miller, and Buck, Access will research incorporating different strategies to address their interview processes; transit evaluators and a statistical comparison of how many applicants are being denied with a comparison of denials this year versus last year, how many are overturned and report back to the Commission.
